

SPORTS SPOKES

SUBSCRIBE NOW

HOME THE MAGAZINE S'NS STORE ADVERTISE RESOURCES CALENDAR CUSTOMER SERVICE

Also In This Issue

In My Opinion Two Opposites, One Cause

Sailing Top Marks

Rugby Victory Is Sweet

Hunting It's Tradition

Scorecard Skiing & More

Health & Fitness Be Aware of the Risks

Girl Power! Get in the Action

Q&A Pushing the Boundaries

Juniors New England Clinic

Playbook Meet & Greet

Timeout What's New?

Powder-Fresh

Andrea Jehn Kennedy

Hitting the Colorado ski slopes is more than fun and games—it enriches the mind, body, and soul.

Lucian Smith takes in the scenery before conquering the mountain.

In just one ski season, Dave Lewis advanced from tethered assistance with instructor Charlie Phelan to skiing independently. Lewis's goal is to mono-ski at next year's Vectra Bank All Mountain Ski Camp and ride the back-country powder with the rest of the group.

This adventure sport camp for people with disabilities, held January 12-16 in Steamboats Springs, Colo., brought together skiers of various disabilities who all wanted to conquer the mountain and improve their skills. The event, a new addition to Adaptive Adventures' All Mountain Camp Series, featured amazing snow conditions and a unique sponsorship from Steamboat Powdercats, a company that takes skiers into the back-country on Sno-Cats.

"We've been doing all-mountain camps for seven years," says Adaptive Adventures Executive Director Joel Berman, who's a three-track skier due to an above-knee amputation. "For years we've wanted to come to Steamboat. Since we've teamed up with Access Anything (www.accessanything.net), things have come together. Steamboat and the community have been friendly and interested in supporting the ski camp."

Berman says Steamboat's camp has already become one of the most supported in the series, and its goal is to become the best of its kind in the country.

Read more about the people whose skills are improved by participating in this Colorado ski camp.

BACK

VIEW CART / CHECK OUT

FREE TEST DRIVE

Got an Opinion?
Click here and Take Our Survey
Get a FREE S'NS T-shirt!

National Disability Sports Conference

March 9 - 11, 2007
Athens, GA

abilities EXPO

REAL PEOPLE • REAL CHALLENGES • REAL SOLUTIONS

New York Metro • Southern California • Metro Detroit
April 21 - 23, 2006 • June 14 - 16, 2006 • August 10 - 20, 2006
Northern California • Texas
November 3 - 5, 2006 • December 1 - 3, 2006

Your Show for Independent and Assisted Living Products & Services

www.abilitiesexpo.com